

FOR RACE AND NATION

TORY + LABOUR = NO JOBS

A CENTURY AGO, Britain was the world's leading industrial nation. Industry was booming, the Royal Navy ruled the waves and Britain was at the height of its power. Today, the slide of manufacturing since that time has turned Britain into a second-rate nation. Tory and Labour governments have done nothing to halt Britain's industrial decay. There has been no vision and no determination to turn Britain's fortunes around. As a result, manufacturing is weak, jobs are scarce and the wealth that these things create to provide for social services is just not there.

It doesn't have to be like this. The economic success of Japan was built upon a combination of keeping foreign imports out thus allowing it to build its economic base, encouraging high saving levels and directing all investment into its home economy. A stable society with traditional values and an aptitude for hard work and technical excellence ensured success.

This is something that can be achieved by almost any nation. Any reading of British history shows that this nation has all the necessary values and talent described above and more. In addition, Britain unlike Japan has vast resources of energy, in coal, gas and oil. There is no reason for British economic achievement not to be at least as great as that of Japan.

A little while ago, Ford bosses based in America made the decision to axe 500 jobs at their Halewood plant on Merseyside. Typically, they announced 1,300 job losses and after the outcry 'backed down' and agreed that 'only' 500 jobs would go. House of Fraser have axed 1,000 jobs, North East regional railways are to cut another 1,000, and 1,500 jobs have gone at Comet and Norweb.

In January, BN reported that Lucas Varity axed 1,500 jobs in Britain. On the backs of 1,500 highly skilled and well-paid workers, the company paid out a handsome dividend to its share-holders.

Still, there is some good news. McDonalds have announced plans to create 5,000 jobs over the next three years!

Ford's Halewood factory, reprieved for now but with no long term future under Tories or Labour.

Even a casual observer can see what is going wrong with our economy. Highly paid, highly skilled jobs are being lost, and are being replaced by low paid, low skilled and part time jobs. Highly skilled technicians and engineers with families to support will no doubt be able to flip burgers at McDonalds on a fifth of their previous salary. Government boasts of falling unemployment are a hollow sham and cruel deception.

If unemployment is falling, then why is the welfare burden rising? The answer is that government shunts thousands off of the unemployment register and onto various 'schemes'. But all these people still receive their giro. It is to support this burden that the national debt has doubled in the last five years.

The reason for unemployment is a weak economy. It is not lack of training, it is not lack of education and it is not bone-idleness. There is only one cure for unemployment and that is to strengthen the economy and hence create jobs. Not token jobs through over-manning, but real jobs. Well paid jobs in new and revitalised industries — manufacturing industries. That can only come about through massive new investment and substantial economic growth. Neither the Tories nor Labour will be able to achieve such growth under the present system. The only way to achieve substantial growth and attain full employment is to replace imported consumer durables, currently running at 50 per cent of the total, with home manufactured products. The growth potential for British industry is something like 86 per cent. That kind of boom would bring an unprecedented increase in national wealth and prosperity. The BNP is committed to just such a programme.

The British National Party is pledged to the gradual halting of the importation of foreign manufactured products and their replacement by goods made in Britain. The excuse of protection leading to a lack of choice, inefficiency and feather bedding simply won't wash. Japan has the strongest motor cycle industry in the world and competition is fierce: Honda, Suzuki, Kawasaki and Yamaha are world leaders not lame ducks. In parallel with the halt on foreign imports, the BNP would create a strategic economic council made up of government and industry to coordinate economic activity Japanese style. Existing industries would expand and new industries would be created to produce all of our needs.

The British National Party has concrete proposals for creating a boom economy and eliminating unemployment. These proposals would provide substantial growth and full employment for the first time in a generation.

TORIES TO END JURY TRIALS

The most hated Home Secretary in living memory, Mr. Michael Howard struck another blow at British freedom last month when he unveiled plans to curtail jury trial for some categories of offences.

Howard, who has done more to advance the police state in Britain than anyone since the second world war appears to do nothing other than strike down precious British freedoms hard won over centuries. Police in Britain have the most wide-ranging powers in Europe. Gatherings of just a few people on privately owned land can be broken up, the right to silence has been ended, police will have the power to burgle, trespass and eavesdrop without hindrance. The 'safeguards' to protect the public are a mere figleaf. As the remorseless rise of crime continues — caused in no small part by Tory social policies affecting the economy, immigration and morality etc. — so Howard has been able to take away more and more of our freedoms cheered on by a grateful public.

Howard defended his proposals by citing the case of £12,000 for a court trial to determine the guilt or innocence of a man accused of stealing £2. That kind of expense is too much he says.

The cost, however, is irrelevant. A charge of stealing is as serious a charge to be made on anyone that there is. Are only the well-healed to get a jury trial? When the rich steal, like Maxwell, they steal by the million. No doubt these cases will be deemed 'serious' enough by Howard to warrant a jury trial, but for the rest of us, the protection of a jury could be a thing of the past.

Howard's measures are, he says, to eliminate delays in the system and is not simply a cost saving measure. As everything the Tories do has cost at the root of it, Howard's denials cannot be taken seriously. In the Tory quest to save money, one of our most basic rights is to be axed — unless of course, you happen to be super rich.

'REFUGEES' TO KEEP COMING

UK TO TAKE IN CRIMINALS & SEX CASES

Mohammed Sadegh, a homosexual Iranian has been allowed to stay in Britain because he fears persecution in Iran because of his sexuality. The Home Office backed down from an appeal court hearing and allowed Sadegh 'exceptional' leave to remain. Sadegh originally claimed that he feared 'political persecution', later when that was turned down, he thought of the homo ploy. Dozens of other cases are to follow as Britain becomes a haven for the world's perverts.

In a second case featuring an Iranian, the European Commission for Human Rights has ruled that Michael Howard cannot deport an Iranian drug smuggler because he would risk torture if he returned home to Iran. The precedent means that illegal immigrants and criminals need only to reach the safety of Britain's shores and commit crimes here to reinforce their 'case' to stay.

In another instance, a Pakistani woman also won the right to remain in Britain after she was divorced by her husband. The woman claimed that she would be a social outcast in her home country.

These cases mean that Britain has no legal defence from being turned into the dumping ground for the world's hard luck social cases, criminals and sexual perverts — all of them 'enriching' our wonderful multi-racial and multi-cultural society.

EVERY TRICK IN THE BOOK

Gohar Rehman, 21 came to Britain as a visitor in 1992. He got an extension to stay as a working holiday-maker! When his time was up he applied for an extension but was refused. He then unsuccessfully applied for political asylum. Six days before he was due to be deported he married 'British' Rhajwant Singh. Unlucky Rehman didn't realise that such marriages don't count towards staying if entered into after notice to quit.

Gohar Rehman: Another illegal who will stop at nothing to milk the promised land.

Perhaps he should have said that he was homosexual! When Rehman is finally deported, BN trusts that his wife and her three children from a previous marriage will join him. After all, the family should stay together don't you think?

HONG KONG

In a move calculated to increase immigration into crowded Britain even more, the government has given passports to 8,000 Indians and Pakistanis living in Hong Kong. The government explained this giveaway by saying that the people had a long and historic link with Britain. BN would beg to differ and say that these people have an even longer and stronger link and with even greater family ties to India and Pakistan!

Since Thatcher and Major between them offered up to 5 million Hong Kong Chinese the right to come to Britain, the foreign office has refused to say how many have taken up the offer and will be coming in just a few months time. Will it be 5 million? Or will it be 'only' 1 or 2 million? No-one is saying.

JOHN MAJOR:

Has let in 600,000 immigrants and pledged entry to 3 million Hong Kong Chinese

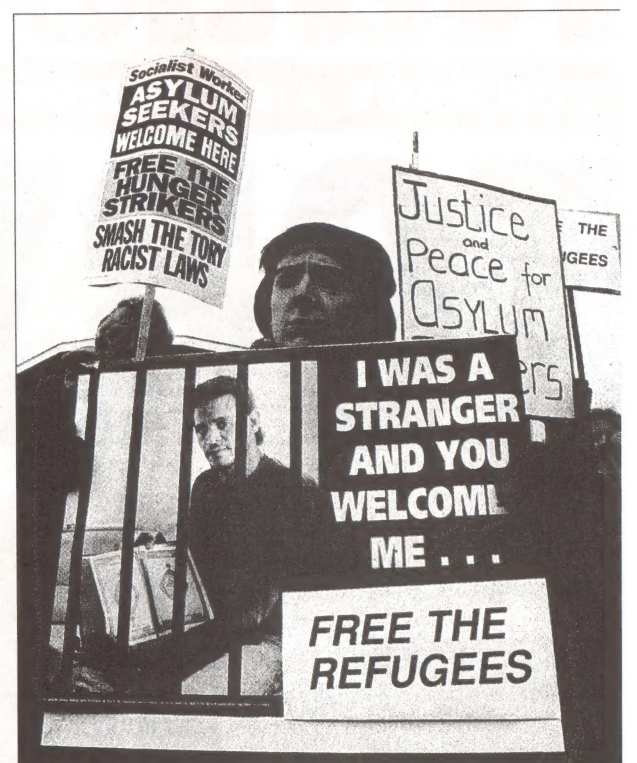

Meanwhile, there has been a real flap as the government has told Britain's councils to nod through planning permissions to build another 4.4 million houses urgently. Whole estates up and down the country from the South West to Scotland have had estates built which local officials have kept vacant in readiness for the Hong Kong exodus. Britain is currently suffering immigration levels of 100,000 per year. With millions more threatened this Autumn, even another 8,000 is too much.

UNLAWFUL HOWARD

Home Secretary bungler Michael Howard has been judged to have acted illegally by the courts so many times that it is difficult to keep track of his recidivism. Last month judges upheld the October ruling that declared refugees should not be left to starve on the streets. The appeal led Nick Hardwick of the Refugee Council to say: "The government's policy is in tatters and local authorities have been left to deal with the mess." Hardwick is quite right and the appeal ruling means that the flow of refugees will continue and that lack of government provision obliges local authorities to look after them placing an intolerable burden on a comparatively small number of councils to take care of what is a national problem.

Meanwhile the hunger strike at Rochester prison by refugees provided an excellent example of the kinds of people that are swarming to our shores. One man is a paedophile who had already been deported once after being found guilty of raping a little girl and had returned with false papers. Bleeding heart liberals clamoured for their release. What about the girl who had been raped? Or her family? Typically, the bleeding hearts were silent.

Another asylum seeker, Ejike Emenike who claimed persecution in Nigeria has been shown up to be a fraud. One of the hunger strikers at Rochester, he claimed to be a church minister and to have suffered beatings. Back in Lagos, his brother-in-law said that he was almost a pastor because "he went to church a lot." Father Matthew Kukah, dismissed the claims of beatings saying: "If anything of that nature had happened, and that person had a church, we in the Christian Liberals and Communists campaign for millions of third worlders to come to Britain.

Association of Nigeria would know."

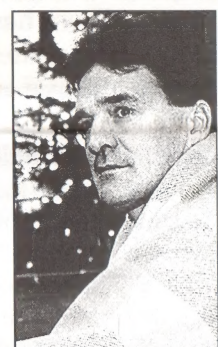

Emenike, who claimed to be shielding his wife by not naming her had an ulterior motive: he left her destitute in a Lagos slum five years ago before leaving for the good life in France and then Britain.

At the same time Crisis, the homeless persons charity estimates that a quarter of all homeless people are former soldiers, sailors and airmen. Their average age is 42, and they are 35 times more likely to commit suicide. Unable to cope with the change from ordered barracks to a harsh civvy street, many find themselves on the streets. The government, it seems, cannot afford to house former heroes but it can afford to have 100,000 immigrants coming into the country every year and having to be fed, housed, clothed and found jobs for.

A British National Party government would end this madness. Immigration would be stopped and our homeless properly housed. The savings would be immense and our homeless problem would be solved. There are enough resources in this country to give everyone a decent standard of living — but not if we have to house, feed and clothe half the third world!

Quotation

"Every generation in the journey of a people through time is important, but the evidence indicates that the current generation of the Northern European peoples, wherever they may be scattered across the face of the earth, live at an unusually decisive and crucial point in the history of their kind. The decisions made by the present generation of Northernkind will largely determine the economic and genetic future of the Northern European peoples. It is a crossroads in the path of racial development, with one path leading in the direction of racial insignificance and oblivion while the other leads in the direction of racial apotheosis and mastery over the universe. The course we follow will be determined by our choice, including default as a form of choice, and our choice will be determined by ideas. The crisis confronting Northernkind is a crisis of ideas."

Richard McCulloch - The Ideal and Destiny

TORIES DEVASTATE BRITAIN'S MILITARY

Since the Tories won office in 1979, the armed forces have sustained the biggest cuts in defence spending since the second world war. Slashing expenditure in a manner which Labour have only ever dreamt of, the Tories have systematically reduced the number of ships and aircraft available to the Royal Navy and to the RAF. Troop levels have drastically fallen.

The consequences of a falling armed service budget is falling manpower, lower maintenance, less training and less equipment.

Last month, troop levels dipped below 100,000 for the first time in 180 years, and the Ministry of Defence is offering soldiers, sailors and airmen bonuses of up to £10,000 to stay in the forces. But it wasn't long ago that Tory cuts meant soldiers serving in Bosnia were receiving redundancy notices! As a result of the cuts, morale in the services is low and skilled men are leaving. For the same reasons, Britain's youth do not see a future in the armed services either. Government short-sightedness has led to a 5,500 shortfall in young soldiers. Special recruitment efforts are being made to lure the young back into the services. John Major wants to see an expansion of the cadet forces. BN says fine — but why was the scheme largely scrapped by a Tory government in the first place? Defence Minister, Senior Portillo to deflect attention from the government's ruinous policies had the cheek to say that a Labour defence review was "a mask for cuts." Coming from the government which has been the biggest destroyer of Britain's military capability in decades, and which has imposed another cut of 3 per cent next year, that's rich. Government cuts in military defence spending have reached 20 per cent since 1991.

TORY CUTS = RAF DEATHS

Deaths in the RAF are up sharply as cuts in training and tendering out for maintenance contracts has seen safety put in jeopardy. Only last month, the inquest was held for Flight Lieutenant Simon Burgess who died when his Hawk jet trainer flipped over immediately upon take-off. He ejected straight onto the runway and died of his injuries. Burgess, who was one of Britain's youngest jet instructors at 28 died because of poor maintenance, when a connecting rod to the ailerons, which controls roll, was left loose. The maintenance crew of 11 was down to half strength through manpower shortages caused by under-funding.

The Commander-in-Chief of Strike Command, Air Chief Marshal Sir William Wratten has said in a leaked memo that manpower shortages 'are beginning to bite deeply into our capacity to meet operational remits'. Lack of cash is the problem with a lack of spare parts to keep units functioning. Tornado squadrons are often down to just one serviceable aircraft and in one case so short of engines is the RAF,

British armoured might: Challenger main battle tanks exercising in Poland

Killed by Tory cuts:
Flt Lt Burgess

that fitters removed a Tornado engine which had just landed and before it had even cooled down to use it in another aircraft.

The cuts made in Britain's armed services are a national scandal. The Tories have cut and cut again at Britain's once proud military. The result is a badly under-resourced force with poor morale, overworked, over-stretched and badly deployed. Labour's history of passivism is well known.

The BNP believes that a navy which can't even defend our North Sea oil platforms is not strong enough; an air force which has cannibalised aircraft for parts is also not strong enough and an army which has periodically had regiments amalgamated and tanks restricted on firing and driving practice because of cost is undermanned and under-funded.

Another unrelated defence problem for Britain is that of its membership of NATO. Whatever the merits of it in the past, there is none today. Indeed, the enlargement of NATO to include Poland and Hungary etc. is itself a threat to world peace. Does Britain really want to get dragged into a war between Poland and Belaruss, or even Russia? It's unthinkable. Yet this is what the Tories and Labour are committing us to by agreeing to NATO enlargement.

A BNP government would immediately reduce the army's overstretch by withdrawing from foreign entanglements. Troops would be brought home from Hong Kong, Germany, Belize, Bosnia and Cyprus. At the same time, Britain would withdraw from NATO which by its aggressive expansionism could well cause a new war. Lastly, a BNP government would build up our armed forces to a level at which they can adequately defend Britain. It is a policy of armed neutrality.

The Army Cadet force provides discipline, builds character and is an excellent introduction into the services for youngsters.

THE TED BUDDEN COLUMN

THE PENNY DROPS

Some time ago, Muslim leaders in Britain demanded that the next census form should include questions on religious affiliation. Their point was that Muslims now constitute such a large proportion of our wonderful multi-ethnic and multi-cultural population that their influence is being underrated and that hidebound British folk actually object to the building of mosques on every street corner are ignoring the advantages: one of which being that the howling of the muezzin at the crack of dawn would make it unnecessary to buy an alarm clock.

The Government refused point blank. Here was a classic conflict of interests. The Muslims wished to emphasise their sheer numbers. The last thing the Government wanted was for the great British couch potato to be made aware of those numbers lest they cease to be enraptured by East Enders and actually sit up and take notice.

An impasse one might think. Not a bit of it. For the Government has suddenly caved in and agreed to the Muslim demand.

No need to wonder why. For the latest statistics demonstrate that although immigration is now back to, if not past, its previous peak, despite the Government's ruthless 'tough restrictions', most of those who are now enriching our culture are illegal immigrants.

For those who slouch through the corridors of Whitehall, the penny has dropped. Since most of the Muslims are illegal anyway, they certainly won't be registering in any census. Ergo, the Muslims will be thwarted and the Government will be able to assure the great British couch potato that its 'tough restrictions' are working.

So it's back to East Enders and sleep your life away.

LEST WE FORGET

It is a standing disgrace that Britain does not have a Holocaust memorial. After all, people do tend to forget; in fact sometimes we are allowed to forget for, oh, several minutes at a time. The problem is where to put it. It should clearly be in a place of honour: Whitehall perhaps. Maybe we should demolish the Cenotaph and put a Holocaust memorial in its place? After all, the people it commemorates are dead and everything they fought for is dead as well. So it is, ineffect, redundant. Still I suppose some quaint old fashioned folk might object so maybe it would be better to leave it for now.

It is therefore all the more welcome that the National Lottery has granted £12.6 million to the Imperial War Museum to establish a permanent Holocaust exhibition. It is not known if this was the inspiration of Mr. David Daniel Sieff, the famous Zionist and Chairman of the National Lottery Charities Board, since the award was made by the Heritage Lottery Fund, whatever that is.

I suppose that those quaint old fashioned folk who might object to the demolition of the Cenotaph are just the sort of people who might quibble about the precise relationship of the Holocaust to our heritage. They might also ask what the hell it is to do with the Empire since the only possible connection could be the British Mandate in Palestine after the war when the surprisingly large number of survivors of the Holocaust flooded into Palestine and killed British Soldiers and civilians with great gusto. But these really are mere quibbles for we are all guilty and the media never tire of telling us so.

But one might raise one reasonable objection. Is this not a case of overkill?

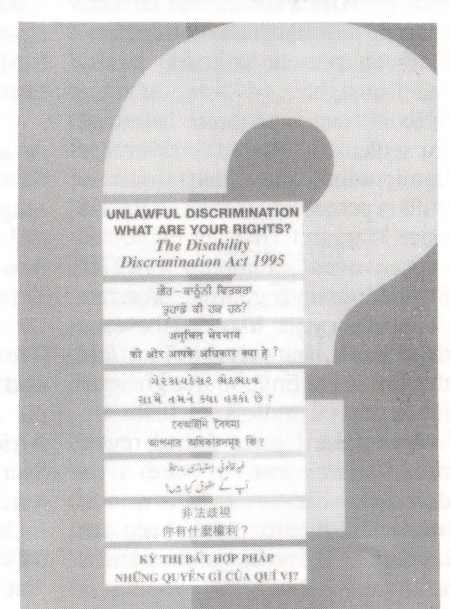

For there is already a Permanent Holocaust Exhibition; one that springs into action whenever the Israelis commit some atrocity against the Arabs or Israel might be considered the ruthless aggressor rather than the innocent victim. We are immediately force marched down memory lane and subjected to a positive barrage of Holocaustiana.

Furthermore we already pay a considerable amount of money to maintain this Permanent Holocaust Exhibition. It's called a television licence.

An unsolved race murder and the Eltham five

Last month, the Daily Mail incited the deaths of five young men in Eltham in South East London. The death of black teenager Stephen Lawrence four years ago has never been punished. His parents understandably grieve and ask where is justice? In doing so they have not unnaturally sought to resolve the affair. The private prosecution they brought for murder failed when the prosecution withdrew its case against the three defendants: Neil Acourt, Luke Knight and Gary Dobson. After the collapse of the trial last April the audio tapes of police microphones were played on national TV. Last month after the second inquest into Lawrence's death and after the video tapes were played showing the film together with the original sound footage, the Daily Mail ran its 'Murderers' accusation, accusing the three defendants acquitted last year as well as Jamie Acourt and David Norris

BN condemns unreservedly the Lawrence murder. Indeed, of all the political parties at the next election, the BNP is the only one to advocate capital punishment. At the same time, the Daily Mail has a lot to answer for. It piously stated that if it's 'Murderers' accusation was untrue then the youths could sue. What rot! Because the Eltham 5 are poor and white they have been branded murderers with no comeback. Legal aid is not available for libel actions and the Daily Mail knows it. Living as they do in South East London they are also at serious risk of being killed in revenge — prompted by the Mail's attack.

At least two of the five: Neil Acourt and David Norris are, as BN said last year (see BN May 1996), thoroughly nasty pieces of work. In the tapes, Acourt speaks of wanting every black "chopped up and left with nothing but fing stumps." Later, both he and Norris speak of mugging old grannies and killing the c*. Their vile, loud-mouthed braggings also included a wish to shoot policemen. What the tapes show are crude, vicious and nasty individuals. What the tapes do not show is any admissions of guilt even when the subject of the Lawrence murder was brought up — not even to themselves.

The Mail reported that it was common knowledge that four names kept coming up for Lawrence's murder. In other words, rumour was rife. One senior officer said: "It was almost a sea of rumour. That was all we had in the end — rumour. The evidence was never really that strong." And what about the other rumours? How much credence can be given to any rumour? Such as the rumour that Stephen Lawrence had himself been involved in a stabbing incident just two weeks before his death? A photograph of Lawrence clearly shows him making a black power clenched fist salute. Or that after his death, police found a knife strapped to his leg under his trousers? Rumour and distasteful bigotry is not a proper basis to decide guilt. Hence the reason for the prosecution dropping it case in the first instance.

Stephen Lawrence died because of an insane policy of multi-racialism which throws people from vastly different racial and religious backgrounds together like so many rats in a small space. The result is violence and that result was completely predictable — the politicians had only to look at America. Since then we have all seen the results of the multi-racial nightmare in Bosnia, India, Africa, Sri Lanka and a hundred other countries where this evil policy is practised. We have also seen it on Britain's own streets in the riots that have plagued our country since its advent. It is because the BNP wishes to avoid a communal bloodbath that the party advocates separation through repatriation — for the benefit of black and white alike.

The unfettered power of the press: Freedom for the powerful and no redress for the poor or the weak.

Lastly, BN makes an observation: The Lawrence case has taken up far more publicity than more numerous deaths when whites have been the victims of racial murder combined. Why is this? Are white deaths not important? Or is there a political agenda at work that only cases involving white perpetrators are of interest? That whites have to be made to feel guilty? Since white deaths are not of interest and nor are blacks at the hands of Asians — Trevor Coveley to name just one. It would seem so.

Albert Mariner, Richard Everett, Catherine Ayling, Terry May, Paul Carter, Michael Doohar, Philip Gosling, Gary Wilmer, Danny Westmacott, Mark Sharp, Keith Blakelock, Gareth Wilshaw, Philip Lawrence and many others forgotten about by the media have also died.

We remember them. They were white and they too were victims.

STEPHEN LAWRENCE

SIR—Your leader "The unmentionable issue" breaks new ground by exposing the lie that mass immigration is at an end.

We are in the midst of a new wave as substantial as that of the seventies. Immigrants from Eastern Europe, Africa and the Far East are arriving in Britain in large numbers. Nor, on present policies, is any relief in sight.

Even figures of those "admitted for settlement" (the official level of immigration) show that around a million people have settled in Britain since Margaret Thatcher expressed concern over "swamping" in 1978. Such admissions continue at a rate of 50,000 a year. Many of these are dependants, but were we not told that this was a finite source? Instead it has proved endless.

And these figures fail to reveal the full extent of the new demographic revolution. If ministerial rhetoric could keep our borders secure no illegal immigrants would cross them, but speeches at Conservative Party conferences have proved an inadequate safeguard. Immigration officers have repeatedly given warning that our entry controls are inadequate; there are few checks to ensure that visitors leave Britain instead of staying on illegally; and the crackdown on bogus asylum seekers has clearly gone awry. Between 1992 and 1995 just 7,900 out of 54,000 rejected asylum applicants actually left the country.

"The Americans are terrified that if we show a black slave trader, they'll lose money at the box office, that they will be thought "incorrect" by part of the dollar-paying public. "They don't want to offend the black community by showing that slaves were collected

TORY CRIMINALITY

Following on from last month's BN in which Tory sexual perversions were laid bare comes news that former Vice Chairman of Kemp Town, Brighton Tories, Mr. Michael Land, has been convicted of running a homosexual child pornography video racket. Incredibly, despite national concern over paedophiles, Mr. Land who compounded the offence by pleading not guilty to conspiracy to supply the videos was given a suspended 9-month prison sentence. ● Trevor Brindley, former Tory councillor for Wednesfield South on Wolverhampton council was found guilty of stealing more than £1,000 from a conservative dinner he organised while a councillor and also of vote rigging by asking a friend to vote illegally. Brindley was sentenced to 8 months imprisonment.

TORIES ON WAY OUT

Britain has suffered terribly under the Tories. Eighteen years of immigration, industrial decline, corruption, rocketing crime and incompetence will, hopefully, soon come to an end — to be replaced by much the same under Labour.

Last month, voters in Wirral routed the Tories and turned an 8,000 Tory majority into an 8,000 Labour one. Polling shows that two-thirds believe that the Tories are basically dishonest, including 30 per cent of their own supporters!

and provided by the blacks, and that there were black slave barons. They are frightened of black opinion."

For Sir Peter, today's Left-wing and liberal censorship has replaced the Right-wing censorship with which he was confronted earlier in his career.

"This is only another form of political correctness. I think political correctness is censorship under another name. It's making sure that subjects which are contentious and need discussing are not dealt with."

It is with satisfaction that he states: "One of the wonderful aspects of the late part of this century is that we realise politicians are... amateur, weak and corrupt."

"Proposing censorship of the arts is the equivalent of saying we should censor news. Constraint on information and constraint on creativity are one and the same thing and are equally dangerous."

Let's not become too ruthless in rejecting the existence of racial characteristics, especially where humour is involved. Nearly 50 years ago the UK signed a UN convention obliging us to provide political asylum to anyone with a well grounded fear of persecution for political or religious reasons.

Most of the asylum seekers at Rochester Prison could probably make such a claim, and no one could possibly want them to die of starvation. But there is a problem. Half the world could make an equally strong claim.

Even if the bogus claimants were weeded out, there would still be far too many genuine applicants.

Anyone living in Algeria, Iraq or Iran could claim a well-grounded fear of persecution; that is 100 million people right away. So could the population of black Africa: hundreds of millions. So could every single mainland Chinese: around a billion of them.

Political asylum is a 19th-century concept. In an age when travel was difficult, while the average refugee was an heroic individual who had risked his life for democracy and freedom, there were no reasons not to grant asylum. In those days, virtually the entire refugee population in London could be accommodated in the British Museum reading room. But now with television to broadcast the attractions of life in Britain and universal air travel, so that London is only a few hours' journey from the most benighted regions on Earth, the temptation to seek refugee status is overwhelming. In the age of the airliner we have a law dating from the age of the stagecoach.

There is only one sensible way to clarify the law: to declare that in future there shall be no right of political asylum in this country.

ANTI-WHITE DISCRIMINATION IS RACISM

British people are becoming more aware of the racism that exists in our society — directed at white people! Well-publicised cases of white workers taking employers to Industrial tribunals for their preferential treatment of non-white employees has led to increased public consciousness of anti-white racism.

In January, William Biglington took Lewisham council to the tribunal alleging that he was sidelined to help the council promote more blacks and Asians. As it turns out, Mr. Biglington is a race-mixer with an Asian wife. While that is regrettable, it doesn't alter the fact that he was discriminated against on grounds of race. His boss told him to move aside to further the career prospects of blacks by saying: "Look at it from the manager's point of view, Bill. We have a black female whose career is being blocked. What will the members think?"

More to the point is what whites will think. This kind of racial politics is rife all over the country, ironically just as it has been discredited in America, and many erstwhile liberals have suddenly found themselves hoisted on their own petard. Many are reappraising their thinking on race. You can almost hear them thinking "I'm not a racist, but..."

At the same time as the Biglington case, Alan Jones was awarded nearly £20,000 from Japanese firm Yaohan UK at another industrial tribunal for unfair dismissal and racial discrimination. Yaohan managers sacked him with no warning and cited his poor command of English despite the managers concerned having almost no grasp of English at all. Alan told the tribunal that they never acknowledged him and called him 'gaijin' — a derogatory term for foreigner.

A day after the Yaohan case, an industrial tribunal found another Japanese employer, Quick Corporation guilty of unfair dismissal and racial discrimination. Cliff Wakeman was told he was a 'strange colour' with a 'face like a football'.

BN BRIEFING

ILLEGALS DROWN

Another ten Moroccan illegal immigrants have drowned in the Straits of Gibraltar after their boat sank in their bid for the easy life in the West. This is in addition to the twenty-five who drowned and which was reported in December's BN. Hundreds die in the attempt each year.

Greek police have arrested 107 would-be illegal immigrants and are to deport them prior to checking their story that 300 of them died at sea during a sea rendezvous when one ship accidentally holed another which then sank. All the migrants who had transhipped to the smaller vessel went down with it.

REPATRIATION FILE

Malaysia has deported 1,000 illegal immigrants to Indonesia.

Hong Kong has closed one of its last two detention camps and repatriated 530 Vietnamese back to their homeland. All the rest are due to go by July when Red China takes back the colony.

MULTI-RACIALISM FAILURE

Multi-racialism doesn't work in Britain, and nor it seems does it work in Indonesia either. Government attempts to resettle people from densely populated islands onto sparsely populated Borneo has run into opposition from the local Dyaks who object to immigrants from other islands settling on Borneo, taking scarce resources and repaying Dyak hospitality with crime and violence. [This sounds familiar — Ed.]

Dyaks run amok for two days to take revenge for the stabbing of two of their tribesmen by a Maurean immigrant in a row over a woman at a pop concert. Five people were killed and nine injured. The government responded by flooding the area with hundreds of troops to restore calm, and enforce its evil multi-racialism.

These disturbances are separate to those of December when a Muslim mob attacked Christian Churches and Chinese-owned property.

Many of the people forcibly resettled from the large islands of Java, Bali and Madura to other islands such as Irian Jaya and Sumatra, are unhappy and wish to return to their own homelands.

DER JUDE RIFKIND

Insensitive Germans last month caused a row when the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung spoke of Britain's foreign Secretary as 'the Jew Rifkind'.

It's so unfair on poor Malcolm Rifkind, because they could equally have picked on Home Secretary Michael Howard as 'Der Jude Howard', or our EU commissioner Leon Brittan, or top Tories Baroness Blatch, Edwina Currie, Gillian Sheppard, or indeed opposition figures Jack Straw, Peter Mandelson, Barbara Roche, Greville Janner, Philip Goldenburg, Alex Carlisle and Lord Anthony Lester — together with a whole host of lesser Juden. Typical Germans!

ETHNICS HATE EACH OTHER IN MULTI-RACIAL BRITAIN

Last month saw published one of the most interesting polls for some time on racial attitudes in Britain. Whites showed least hostility to the idea of their relatives marrying outside their own racial group and the most racist group in this regard was Asians. Of course, whites have been much more the object of social conditioning in this regard and so may have given what they thought was the correct answer. When asked if they thought 'others' in their racial group would mind the same thing 63 per cent said they thought that they would — a big jump of 50 points. Polling on racial attitudes in France reveals that much more honest answers are obtained by pollsters asking about the opinions of 'others' instead of those of the subject being questioned. There is hope for us yet!

Other findings were that Blacks, Jews and Asians don't like each other and that Asians in particular felt that the majority of refugees coming to Britain were bogus. The latter finding was significant because who, after all, would be in a better position to know?

A survey of Blacks found that more than half — 60 per cent do not identify with Britain and think of themselves primarily as Afro-Caribbean.

Still on surveys, the European Youth Survey found that 29 per cent of young Britons disagree that all races are equal — making British youth the most racistist in Europe and that the same young Britons had a 64 per cent acceptance of homosexuality — the third lowest in Europe.

Of the Britons, 90 per cent said that criminals were let off too lightly, and 70 per cent backed capital punishment.

ASIANS DITCH MADDEN

Immigrant fawning Max Madden, MP for Bradford West, got his comeuppance when Asians banded together to deselect him. Madden complained that the United Front of Pakistani Muslims had worked a secret deal to oust him. The winner, however, was Marsha Singh — a Sikh. Whatever the truth, Asians will find the new Asian candidate for Bradford West is a better bet than white racial renegade Madden. After all, if Madden can sideline his own kith and kin in favour of the Asians, then how can Asians feel sure that he won't dump them along the road too?

LABOUR GO GAY

Jack Straw, Labour shadow home affairs spokesman, has pledged a Labour government to repeal section 28 of the 1988 Local Government Act which prohibits teachers and councils from portraying homosexuality in a positive light. Ordinary decent people will have Labour to thank for forcing homosexual perversion down the throats of their children across the whole country. Wooing the 'gay' vote further, Straw pledged a free vote on lowering the age of homosexual consent from 18 to 16.

Lawrence murder, now some four years old, is a case in point. I am just as anxious to see the killers of Stephen Lawrence brought to justice as anyone else, but I wonder if the purpose of the recent Daily Mail splurge is to build it up into a cause celebre for the race-relations (let's beat whiteness) industry? Edward Atkinson, Norfolk.

Sir,
First let me congratulate BN on an excellent January issue. Secondly, I have some ideas for readers to consider. Nationalism is not just about leafleting and meetings — it's also about building up a network of good people who know and trust each other. With this in mind I would like to encourage social groups such as Dewsbury's 'Sunday Club' which allows people with sensitive careers or personal circumstances to meet other nationalists in relaxed surroundings. Such groups can also raise money for the party and can also lead to greater confidence among our own people. We organised a local Christmas meal in December for instance — just picked up the phone and booked a table. The result is that those who attended can discuss the years achievements and the hopes for the New Year in pleasant and comfortable surroundings, which raises local morale. But it could just as easily have been a mid-summer meal or a barbecue.

A further idea I would like to see encouraged is the use of business card machines found in many shopping centres. It's possible to type in whatever is wanted alongside the party's name and address — and could highlight a local issue for instance. Such cards are very easy to place in libraries, shops and on public transport and usually cost £3 for 50.

Paul Henderson, Woking & District BNP.

Sir,
Having just watched the England football match against Italy in which England were beaten, I couldn't help but notice that the entire Italian team were all-white, whereas the 'English' team at the end of 90 minutes looked like a Caribbean side. Germany which regularly beats England also fields an all-white team and the winning 1966 England World cup side was also all-white. Doesn't this tell us something? No doubt Glenn (politically correct) Hoddle will win plaudits from the race relations lobby, but he won't win much else. Genuine England football fans must feel sick.

Ian Stuart, Nottingham.

Sir,
I attended my first party Rally in January and was impressed by the quality of speeches and the numbers attending.

It lifted me spiritually to be with others sharing a love of country and with a desire to see the party lead this country back to greatness. When the party finally wins, the British people will once more be able to lift their heads high and be proud to say "I am British."

M. Morris, London.

Sir,
Thank you for sending me your excellent paper every month. Keep up the good work and reporting on the real things that are going on in 'our' multi-racial Britain.
Tim Lloyd, Stoke-on-Trent.

Sir,
The tabloid newspapers have been having a field day recently by regurgitating all the events surrounding the death of Stephen Lawrence. It is worthy of them to condemn this foul crime, but it would be even more worthy if they were to spend as much time, and fill as many column inches reminding us all of the other victims of the multi-racial nightmare who just happen to be white, and pointing out that similar walls of silence from the ethnic communities from whence the perpetrators came have successfully thwarted all attempts by the police to obtain convictions.

The casualties of the disaster known as multi-racialism into which we have all been plunged are drawn from various ethnic groups, and racial hatred is not an exclusively white phenomenon. This needs spelling out, or are we only to be reminded of atrocities committed only by whites, whilst similar offences by coloureds go unnoticed?

Roger Wood, Rossendale, Lancs.

Sir,
I have just received the February issue of the paper, and it is invaluable for snippets of information that the controlled media screen out. What they 'screen in' is just as important. The recent furore over the Stephen

VICTORY IN FRANCE!

FOREIGN NEWS

LAST month, the Front National rocked the political establishment with a sensational victory in Vitrolles, in the south of France, just north of Marseilles. After witnessing the latest victory of Jean Marie Le Pen's Front National over the entirety of the French national media and the combined forces of all the other political parties, political commentator, Pascal Aubler declared: "If you were there, you saw the wheel of history turn."

The stunning victory saw Catherine Megrét sweep to victory with 53 per cent of the votes cast in the second round of voting to decide the new Mayor. Technically, the voters settled only the question as to who would be the next Mayor of Vitrolles. But the French establishment's decision to 'draw the line' in the key Provence-Cote d'Azur region against the rapidly advancing Front National, Europe's largest nationalist party, made the election 'a crucial national, even international event' according to Le Figaro, France's leading daily newspaper.

The original FN candidate was Le Pen's number two Bruno Megrét, but his candidature was blocked because he had overspent on a previous election campaign. Undeterred, the FN adopted Bruno's wife as their candidate and their campaign roared back into life.

In a move of pure desperation, Alain Juppé the Prime Minister declared that his ruling Gaullist/RPR coalition would withdraw from the election and throw in its support to the main opposition candidate, the Socialist Jean-Jacques Anglade. Communists, Christian Democrats, Greens, Gaullists and the RPR all withdrew in favour of Anglade, making him the standard bearer of the entire French political establishment.

Le Pen described the coalition against him as l'Union des Pourris — the union of the corrupt. "Everybody is against Le Pen," he said, "except the people."

Despite the coalition of right and left against Le Pen, the Front National beat them all by polling 53 per cent of the vote. The New York Times described it as a 'crushing victory' for the Front National. 'The prize in Vitrolles may appear to have been merely the City Hall,' noted the influential German newspaper, Süddeutsche Zeitung, 'but the real significance of this election transcends by far any issues.'

There are some 200 electoral districts in France with similar demographic and economic conditions to Vitrolles, with its 19 per cent unemployment and large immigrant population. 'And that raises, for the first time, the real possibility that the Front National may take over the government of France after the national elections scheduled for next year', the German daily concluded.

FN COULD FORM NEXT FRENCH GOVERNMENT

The French establishment are panic stricken. They threw everything they had against Le Pen and they failed to halt his advance. Le Pen is taking votes from the left and the right including the communists — Vitrolles used to be a communist town! All are aghast at the thought that Le Pen's FN could come from nowhere (they haven't a single seat in the national Parliament) to become the next French government. In the Presidential elections of 1995, Le Pen took 15 per cent of the vote and increased that to 20 per cent in the council elections afterwards.

The ruling conservatives are in a particular quandary. The economic austerity that France is undergoing is designed to make France eligible for the single currency, making Europe more and more unpopular. Yet only the Front National and the Communists are against it. Last year, a similar run off to Vitrolles took place in Dreux between the FN and the Communists. Conservatives and socialists all pulled out to leave the field clear for the communist. On that occasion, the FN were pipped at the post by the reds. The French foreign minister has said that if this state of affairs continues for much longer, people will think that there are only two parties in France: the Front National and 'other'. If that situation continues, it would deal a damaging blow to the credibility of the establishment parties while making Le Pen's FN the official opposition. Another representative of the ruling RPR said that Vitrolles wasn't just a victory for the FN, it was an historic victory.

Following that historic victory for the FN, the conservative and socialist parties have turned savagely on each other for their collective defeat.

On the night of victory, Catherine Megrét was content to let her husband make the victory speech.

Winning team: Catherine and Bruno Megrét

He said: "Tonight in Vitrolles, the wall came down and the dam of the opposition burst... What has happened in Vitrolles today will happen in the rest of France tomorrow."

Megrét could well be right. Alex Duval Smith wrote in the Guardian: '18 months ago, I spent a whole day in Vitrolles trying to find a single person who would admit to have voted [FN]... But there is no longer any taboo attached to voting for the Front National in the south of France'. As Gaullist MP Renaud Muselier said: "The Front National no longer frightens the voters."

Nationalism is on the march in France. It is time for British Nationalists to follow suit!

BNP GENERAL ELECTION FEATURE

When the British National Party contests the next General Election the party will have distributed, courtesy of the Post Office, some two-million leaflets that will reach more than four-million voters.

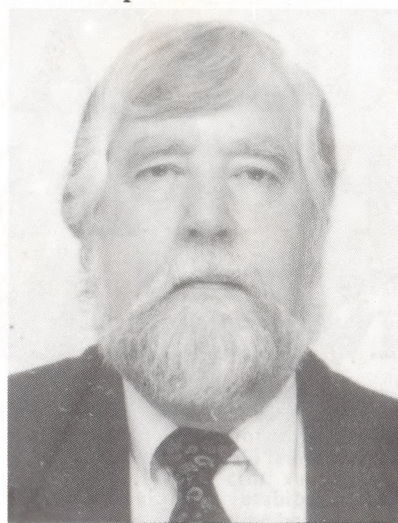

For the BNP, this will be a massive recruitment exercise and also a mass exercise in fighting elections. Some time after the next General Election when the public finally sees through Labour (who BN believes will win), there will be enormous opportunities for the BNP. Having done our recruiting in this election and having trained branch organisers right across the country in the necessities of fighting elections, the party will be well placed to take advantage of any opportunity which presents itself.

This month, BN features John Peacock who is standing in the constituency of Blaby in Leicestershire. An ex-army man seeing active service in Borneo and Aden, John has been the party's East Midlands Regional Organiser from the party's inception and has stood as a candidate in previous General Elections.

Blaby is a white flight constituency for people escaping the immigration that has swamped Leicester over the years. White, and well-to-do middle and working class, it is natural conservative territory and exactly the sort of area that the party needs to break into.

John Peacock was also the party's candidate for Blaby in 1992 when he gained 521 votes for a modest 0.8 per cent of the poll. Since then, the party has grown in stature and it is expected that the vote this time will show a marked improvement on 1992.

JOHN PEACOCK

If they don't already know, constituents in Dewsbury and Bailey will soon understand, once our General Election campaigning gets under way, that the British National Party is the only party in the country to stand unequivocally for the restoration of capital punishment.

We especially demand the death penalty for child murderers, and a national government would also give priority to ensure the physical and moral protection of our young from depraved sub-humans.

Within the last few days yet another child murderer has been sentenced to life imprisonment — a monster who abducted a seven-year-old child and subjected her to nameless horrors before killing her.

We now learn that this creature had a 15-year history of child molestation and was well known to the police, having been charged with the rape of a 14-year-old.

There was a judge's recommendation that he should never be released, which means that we — you and I, sir, and all other decent people — will have to bear the cost of keeping his creature in custody or possibly half a century.

During the trial the judge said it was obvious that the killer had been spying on and assaulting young girls, yet there appeared to be no statutory system that would have enabled professionals to supervise him.

Fortunately, if I may use so inappropriate word, he was not a mass murderer, he preferred to have his filthy way with solitary girls.

But isn't there an echo in the distance of the Dunblane horror? In both cases we see the involvement of deranged loners with a long history of sexual perversion.

I wonder how many more innocent young children will be raped,

GOOD MEETING IN BRISTOL

Last month the party held a very good regional meeting in Bristol. One of the newer units of the party, Bristol has quickly progressed from group to branch status and will be contesting no less than two seats at the next election. The meeting which raised more than £170 for local election funds saw speeches from Regional Organiser for Outer East London & Essex, Tony Lecomber and last years BNP press officer, Mike Newland.

Both men spoke of the heathening success of the Front National and observed that that was clearly the way forward. Tony spoke of the consequences of failure and Mike highlighted the ingredients of FN success: seeking acceptability, coalitions and turning the racism charge back on our opponents.

Bristol meeting

● A meeting in Poole, Dorset was curtailed by the arrival of 15 police wearing body armour who closed the meeting down, frisked the audience, confiscated speakers speech notes and opened the eyes of the audience to what is really going on in 'our' country. Complaints are being made.

GENERAL ELECTION FUND

TARGET: £10,000; TOTAL RAISED: £9,855

The party urgently needs to raise £10,000 in a very short time to meet contingency bills for the running of the party's General Election campaign from the centre. This fund is entirely separate from locally organised election funds, whose purpose will be to raise money to finance local candidates. This central fund is intended to build up an adequate financial reserve to ensure that the party has an efficient headquarters organisation and is able to meet numerous expenses which will be involved in the central running of its election machine.

The making of a professional video for the party's political broadcast has now been finished aside from minor editing. This showcase for the party has not come cheap and has cost around £1,500 for camera hire fees alone. Even so, this is cheap by industry standards.

Other costs include printing costs of the party's election manifesto; the hire of mobile telephones to assist organisers managing various campaigns; travel expenses incurred by personnel touring the country and in the transport of election literature to various constituencies; special publicity projects and not least, paying the printer a considerable sum in advance for the printing of the party's election addresses (Two million leaflets don't come cheap!). It is for this purpose the party is targeting to raise £10,000.

Last month, the appeal raised a magnificent £2,258 leaving the party with just £145 to raise. BN wishes to thank all those who have donated to the fund over the last month. Just one more heave! Help us raise the money we need to close this fund. All readers should contribute to this fund. THERE IS NOT MUCH TIME LEFT — please give and please give now!

All donations should be marked 'General Election Fund' and sent to: PO. Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW

VACANCIES

There are still vacancies left for General Election candidacies where people are desperate to vote for the BNP at the next election. All patriots wishing to be considered to represent the party should write to PO. Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW enclosing a political c.v.

There are no residential qualifications and seats could well be (and almost certainly will be) half way across the country from any candidate's home town. All that is required is that candidates are party members and over 21-years of age.

COLNE TIMES LETTERS

ICANNOT praise more highly, or endorse more strongly, retiring REC Chief Aziz Chaudhry for seeking free and open debate with the British National Party (Leader-Times, last week).

It was John Milton who said "Let truth and falsehood grapple freely, for whoever knew truth put to the worst in a free and open encounter." Unfortunately, the BNP rarely, if ever, is given the opportunity to put its political agenda before the electorate in free and open debate.

The British National Party is a legitimate political party which feels it is multi-racialism itself which is divisive in British society and not the policies which oppose it. This is a view I share after witnessing the birth and growth of multi-racialism and the subsequent riots in areas of this country now predominantly occupied by immigrant populations. I can still not come to terms with the million pounds of property damage inflicted against Whites by Asians in Bradford in the recent past, with no charges brought by the authorities against the malefactors, and it causes me acute anxiety to know this can and does happen in Britain, with no main stream politician prepared to speak out against it.

I would, therefore, point out to Burnley MP Peter Pike, when he says racism destroys society, that the only racial attacks I have heard of locally have been against the indigenous public with little or nothing done by politicians, community leaders or police to bring the perpetrators to justice.

BNP to target city

THE far-right British National Party will be standing candidates in Kingswood and Bristol North West at the next general election.

Local MPs have dismissed the threat posed by the candidates as non-existent and one described the group as "a loony fringe party".

Bristol is being targeted by the extreme right wing party, born out of the National Front 13 years ago, as part of its effort to contest 50 seats.

This will mean it will qualify for a free party political broadcast on national television, even though it is unlikely to win many votes.

The BNP candidate for Bristol North West will not be named until January, but Conservative MP Michael Stern said he was not concerned.

"I still trust the good sense of the public to separate the real candidates from the fringe."

These organisations are all much the same to me. I don't take any of them very seriously."

East Londoner Peter Hart has been chosen to stand in Kingswood on the basis that he used to work in the area more than eight years ago.

The local branch of the party has started door-to-door canvassing and delivering its BNP newspaper in Kingswood.

SHOCK AS BNP BIDS FOR SEAT

By JAMES O'BRIEN

A CANDIDATE with the extremist far-right British National Party is planning to mount a campaign in part of Wyre Forest in a shock bid to win a parliamentary seat at the General Election.

John B Haycock, a former soldier, is the BNP prospective candidate in the Leominster constituency which, under recent parliamentary boundary re-organisations, now takes in Rock and Ribbesford, although the parishes are within the Wyre Forest District Council area.

But he has already been warned that fighting a rural constituency will be a difficult job.

John Simmonds, who represents Rock and Ribbesford on Wyre Forest District Council as an independent said: "I am shocked to hear about this possible candidate stomping around here but I think he is sticking his neck out if he thinks he can fool this rural community."

If Mr Haycock contests the Leominster seat, he could be one of at least 50 BNP candidates, mainly standing in the London area, battling for votes in this year's General Election.

This minimum number would entitle the controversial group to a party political broadcast.

Investigations by the Shuttle/News & News show that Mr Haycock, who lives on the Ballhurst Estate, Bromyard, has previously struggled to win support on the campaign trail.

Last May, he was one of six candidates standing at Bromyard for a seat on Malvern Hills District Council but he

Back the BNP

SIR, In response to FH Kavanagh's letter 'Waving white flags to Europe', I would like to point out that Sir James Goldsmith's Referendum Party is a one-issue party.

It campaigns solely for a referendum on whether Britain should be part of a European superstate with a single European currency. After the holding of such a referendum, whatever its conclusion, the party according to Sir James would then disband having achieved its sole objective.

However, there is still hope for us anti-Europeans who are concerned with the terrible state of our country and that is the British National Party (BNP).

They are committed to bring our country out of Europe along with import controls and massive investment into new factories to create real jobs and give our young people a future.

Mr. S. Parnell, Newton Abbot

BNP ELECTION PROFILE

As the General Election draws closer, useful publicity is being made by branches and groups up and down the country. Press releases written and faxed to newspapers all over the country are being used by a media hungry for information.

The media is by no means uniformly hostile to the party. Many papers are prepared to give the party a fair shake with impartial news coverage. The key asset the party has in the media stakes is controversiality. That asset can be exploited by intelligent handling of the press. Achieving publicity is both easy to do and can bring good results. All Organisers, agents and candidates should be engaged on the vital task of securing good publicity for the party to get the word out to a wider audience.

Rossendale hospital is an issue for BNP

THE British National Party will contest the Rossendale and Darwen seat at the General Election.

Mr Andrew Wearden (27) is the prospective Parliamentary candidate. He said: "None of the main three political parties speak out for the British people."

"They want to destroy Britain by submerging us into the Common Market lock, stock and barrel. The British people are not being given a voice."

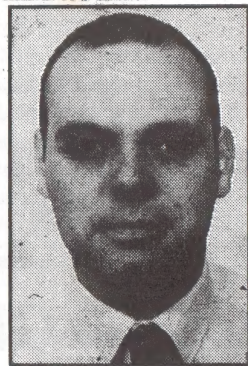

Mr Wearden, a construction industry worker, has lived in Rossendale all his life. He will make the death penalty, law and order and Hong Kong Immigration election issues.

He said: "The British people are crying out for tougher treatment of criminals."

"We could get several million Chinese immigrants coming here this year when we hand back Hong Kong. We cannot provide jobs, homes and social services for British people. Again, the British people must be consulted."

Mr Wearden says the lack of accident and emergency provision at Rossendale General Hospital results in extra suffering as patients are taken to Burnley and Bury.

He lists his hobbies as walking and sports and has a keen interest in local cricket and football clubs.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the European Community: trade with Europe where it suits us but no political ties.
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of Government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food; also the restoration of the fishing industry by protection of our traditional fishing grounds.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO; closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain; British withdrawal from the war in former Yugoslavia, where no British interest is at stake; the bringing home of British forces from Germany; the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- A return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
